

➔ Corporate Kidnap, Ransom & Extortion:

A lifesaver for your bank and employees

Don't let the name fool you. While kidnapping and ransom have always been and continue to be vital threats to your bank and employees, these are no longer the main focus of this important addition to your professional liability program. The likelihood of an attack on your systems grows each day. Economic troubles, combined with the growing accessibility to computers and networks, make the Extortion portion of this program a "must".

Picture a member of your organization receiving a call threatening to kill a family member unless a demand is met. Envision a call to the bank promising the release of private customer information unless there is compliance with a request. These are real dangers facing companies today and you should not be lulled into thinking this will not happen to your bank. In the event that something happens, wondering whether this will cause a significant loss to the bank's financial health should not be the main concern!
